NEW YORK BOTANICAL GARDEN

BIRD-WATCHING ETIQUETTE

- Stay on the paths and roadways. Venturing off paths disturbs wildlife, compacts the soil, and damages plants.
- Do not feed the birds or other wildlife.
- Do not use music or other sound devices to attract birds.

BIRD-WATCHING AT NYBG

The diverse habitats of The New York Botanical Garden offer bird-watchers a chance to see dozens of species of birds throughout the year. The Garden’s magnificent 250 acres of outdoor gardens and collections, open meadows, native forest, and waterbodies such as the Bronx River and Twin Lakes entice birds migrating through the area in spring and fall and those that stay to nest in summer or to spend the winter.
