FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: April 19, 2017

CHIHULY Nights and Programming for All Ages

Live Performance Art, Themed Cocktails, Shopping, and Extended Hours on Select Evenings During CHIHULY Exhibition at NYBG April 22 through October 29, 2017

Dale Chihuly, Red Reeds on Logs, 2017

Bronx, NY—Visitors to The New York Botanical Garden's major new exhibition, CHIHULY, presented by Bank of America, can enjoy a rich offering of programming, including regularly scheduled tours, films, and poetry walks offered every Saturday and Sunday during the exhibition's run from April 22 through October 29, 2017. Special adult and family programming highlights the opening and closing weekends. On CHIHULY Nights, installations throughout The New York Botanical Garden are dramatically illuminated in a celebration of color, form, and light.

In the Everett Children's Adventure Garden, young visitors will explore the connections among art, science, and nature through guided activities facilitated by trained Teen Explainers. Daily programs will provide opportunities to observe the relationship between science and nature-based artwork and to create nature-inspired art.

Opening Weekend Celebration: Earth Day and Annual Plant Research and Conservation Open House April 22–23

CHIHULY opens with a colorful tribute to nature. Beginning at the Leon Levy Visitor Center, walk side by side with giant puppets, drummers, stilt walkers, and other performing artists as the parade moves through the Garden. The festivities continue around the Enid A. Haupt Conservatory with food, drink, lawn games, and live music.

NEW YORK BOTANICAL GARDEN

DIY Craft—Streamers

11 a.m.–2 p.m.

Perennial Garden

Kids and families can make their own colourful streamers and join the Earth Day processions at 1 and 3 p.m. Materials available while supplies last.

Live Music & Lawn Games

12–5 p.m.

Conservatory Lawn

A band that bridges the gap between traditional bluegrass and the New Blue movement, Moonshine Falls creates a harmonious sound that is steeped in tradition without drowning in it.

Flame Work Demonstrations

12–4 p.m.

Conservatory Plaza and Visitor Center

Artists from UrbanGlass—a contemporary glass center in Brooklyn—demonstrate the fascinating art of melting and manipulating hot glass using a torch and flame.

Earth Day Procession

1 and 3 p.m.

Starts at the Native Plant Garden

Join this participatory parade throughout the Garden. FogoAzul, an all-women Brazilian drumline, leads the parade. The Brooklyn Jumbies stilt walkers perform parts of Ocean(s) Blue, charting mankind's relationship with the ocean and the urgent need for collective transformation. An inflatable 10' Earth Ball is carried by the NYBG Explainers, a team of volunteer teen educators from the Children's Adventure Garden. Alice Farley Dance adds a note of surrealist street theater with her bold and beautiful star horn dancers. Lucrecia Novoa's Giant Monarch Butterfly Puppets join in to add even more color and life to the procession.

During the Annual Research and Conservation Open House from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., learn more about the work of Garden scientists and about NYBG's programs and facilities that explore, understand, document, and conserve Earth's plant and fungal diversity. Hands-on demonstrations in the LuEsther T. Mertz Library Building allow visitors to learn what it is like to work in the field. Also offered are behind-the-scenes tours led by NYBG scientists of the William and Lynda Steere Herbarium, Pfizer Plant Research Laboratory, and Haupt Conservatory.

Science and Conservation Booth

11 a.m.–5 p.m.

Conservatory Plaza

See critical components of a scientist's tool kit used on expeditions around the world. See stand-out examples of specimens collected in the field.

Tours of What in the World Is a Herbarium?

12–3 p.m.

Ross Gallery

Meet some of the staff of the Steere Herbarium and learn more about the exhibition What in the World Is a Herbarium?, which is on view in NYBG's Ross Gallery.

Behind-the-Scenes Tours of the Plant Research Laboratory

11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Meet in Ross Gallery

Walk through the Garden's state-of-the-art laboratory and meet some of the scientists who lead teams studying DNA and genomes in order to understand plants, fungi, and algae at their most essential levels.

Space on tours is limited; first-come, first-served.

NYBG CHIHULY Interactive Guide

The NYBG CHIHULY Interactive Guide, made possible by Bloomberg Philanthropies, delivers content to handheld devices that is dynamically customized to the user's location, transforming how visitors are guided through the installations. Each installation appears as an icon on a virtual map. As visitors approach the installations, the NYBG CHIHULY Interactive Guide triggers additional rich contextual information about the artist, artwork, or the process of its creation, as well as immersive 360-degree photography. Another feature allows visitors to share their own photographed images of the sculptures. Mobile media is generously supported by Bloomberg Philanthropies through its Bloomberg Connects program, a global initiative that helps cultural institutions innovate and engage audiences through digital platforms.
