

NYBG

For many years, Fordham University and The New York Botanical Garden engaged in a reciprocal agreement in which NYBG provided Fordham University students, faculty, and staff free year-round grounds access to the Botanical Garden in exchange for Fordham providing free access to NYBG to the University's parking lot to accommodate overflow parking.

Last year that agreement changed. Fordham University students, faculty, and staff still received free grounds access to NYBG, but NYBG had to make a significant payment to Fordham to use its parking lot.

NYBG can no longer afford the payment to Fordham and so is compelled to let the agreement expire. NYBG would be willing to revert to the earlier agreement.

Fordham students, faculty, and staff will continue to receive free Grounds Admission to NYBG every Wednesday, all day, and every Saturday, 9–10 a.m. The Garden has been distributing information to notify visitors from Fordham of other ways they will be able to access the Garden year-round, such as the existing Community Grounds Membership, as well as a special discounted Individual Membership.

We value our relationship with our neighbors at Fordham University and look forward to seeing them continue to visit and enjoy everything The New York Botanical Garden has to offer.
