What

Around the World's Table

Around the World's Table, an artful, immersive data visualization installation created by leading design firm Pentagram, is now on view at The New York Botanical Garden (NYBG) as part of the multi-faceted, garden-wide exhibition Around the Table: Stories of the Foods We Love, examining the art and science of foodways and food traditions and celebrating plants as foundational to all culinary customs. Around the World's Table will help visitors understand the global impact of food production and consumption. On display in the reflecting pool of the Palms of the World Gallery in NYBG's landmark Enid A. Haupt Conservatory, the installation consists of 100 sculptures representing the major food groups we consume, their share in the global diet, and their relative carbon footprint.
